

Tomorrow Lansburgh & Bro. Close Their Great June Drive for 50,000 New Customers With Some Extraordinary Offerings--Read On

Editorial

How interdependent we are on each other, and yet how little we realize it until something unusual happens.

Who would suppose that a street car strike would cut the profits of a daily newspaper, and yet that is exactly what happens.

During the street car strike of Detroit we find the newspaper advertising cut in half. Some department store ads eliminated entirely—because the people couldn't come down town to shop.

Suppose the newspapers suspended publication, people wouldn't be invited down town so alluringly, and the street cars would suffer along with the stores.

Closing up the stores would hurt both the papers and the street cars. We all certainly do need each other.
